Mr. Babson on Russia
Paul Shoup's Companion
E. H. Clark Sees the West
Vincent Astor's Boat
By Arthur Brisbane

READ THIS, and rub your eyes to make sure that you read correctly.
Roger Babson, who predicted, accurately, the downfall of the house that the ticker built, in 1929, now says: "The United States will recognize Russia."
Your conscience will be glad to hear that this "need not imply the slightest approval of Soviet purposes or methods."

Te Mr. Babson the word "Soviet" is as bad as the combination word: "cobra-rattle-snake." Nevertheless, Mr. Babson says that this country will recognize Russia, for these, among other reasons:
Bolshevism is rapidly changing from Communism to "capitalistic methods."
Nearly all important nations, except the United States, have already recognized Russia, "thereby giving them tactical advantages over us in trade relations." (Money talks.)
Third, Russia's admiration, for our business and mass production methods, would easily lead to friendship.
Besides all that, Russia may pay the czarist debts, and Soviet propaganda doesn't hurt us.

It may surprise you to learn from Mr. Babson that Russia is our biggest buyer of agricultural machinery, our third largest buyer of industrial machinery, our fourth best customer for electrical equipment, our second best for construction machinery.
You can't have a customer like that, forever. Business is business.

Managers of railroads and owners of railroad stocks will be interested in an article, "Government Rides the Railroads," written for Charles Scribner's Sons by Paul Shoup, head of the Southern Pacific railroad system.
Mr. Shoup compares the present conditions of railroads, with which everybody is familiar, to what the condition of farmers would be, if the government should restrict them, control them, meddle with and hamper them as it does with the railroads.
Those responsible for railroad management will realize the accuracy of Mr. Shoup's description.

If the proprietor of a farm were allowed to earn no more than six per cent, if he were lucky enough to earn that, he would not like it.
If he had to keep his accounts, purchase supplies, borrow money and buy new properties in accordance with government orders and restrictions, he would not like that.
Nothing is more annoying, nothing interferes with real success more than half-way interference, the system of callous control, many railroad men must feel, although Mr. Shoup doesn't say so, that the government ought to let those that know how to run railroads RUN THEM, or buy them, and pay for them, at their value, and see what the government can do with them.

Edward H. Clark, who runs various mines and other important enterprises from his 44 Wall Street address, and goes to California to enjoy himself, reports the coast and the Middle West more cheerful than the East. "In California," says Mr. Clark, "there is no visible depression."
People organize their lives there, living in cheap, and "the people are accustomed to adjusting themselves to conditions."

The drought, bad for farmers, has been good for some of the old timers. In the "Mother Lode country" of Northern California, old miners are panning gold in the beds of streams that dwindled in the drought and they are making good wages.

Westerners live cheerfully under conditions that would appal some in the East.
While fishing on the Klamath river, Mr. Clark stopped with an old farming couple, 100 miles from a railroad. They had 10 cows and sold seven hundred dollars' worth of milk a year. Visiting tourists yielded about half as much as the 10 cows. With one thousand dollars a year the farmer couple felt as rich as Rockefeller.

They spent $120 a year for sugar, coffee, flour, raised everything else, had their chickens, butter and milk, caught and dried fish, saved some hundred dollars a year.
It is still possible to live comfortably in this country if you know how.

Another word about the Diesel engine, which won't explode or catch fire, and will do several important things.
It will make the farmer and the small community independent of big power companies and

OAKES CALLS FRIEND TO VIEW BODY
Shamed by Arrest, He Shoots Self, Leaves Note, 'Take Good Care of Mabel'

Picture on Page 12
Lancaster, N. H., Sept. 18—Judge Eli C. Oakes, whose resignation from the Superior Court bench was accepted by Gov. Winans today, shortly afterward shot himself in the head in the bedroom of his home here, dying instantly.
The body was found at 11:15 by the William H. Leitch, medical examiner and a lifelong friend of the judge.
The suicide climaxed an investigation into a charge of driving while intoxicated, which was lodged against Judge Oakes in Milton last Sunday night. Although every effort was made to keep the incident a secret, word of the arrest leaked out.
LEFT HIS OWN COURT
The office of Atty.-Gen. Davis had entered the case, and Atty.-Gen. Loring last night conferred with Gov. Winans.

Collings Case Testimony

Huntington, N. Y., Sept. 18—Mrs. Benjamin P. Collings said in her first story in police court today that the Collings cruiser Penguin with two men in a canoe while her husband, beaten and bound hand and foot, could still be seen floating in the water, it was testified at the inquest today.
The testimony was given by Police Sergeant Robert Forest, who was first to question Mrs. Collings. He said she greeted him with a smile and told her story of two men boarding the boat and throwing her husband over the side.
"Was your husband visible at that time?" he said she replied, "Yes," he said she replied, "he was floating in the water near the bow of the boat."
Forest said Mrs. Collings told him that the men had promised her that if she kept quiet nothing would happen to her.
Forest told of going in the boat-house where Mrs. Collings was taken when found on an anchored motorboat.
He said Mrs. Collings told him that she and her husband were asleep on their cruiser Penguin when two men boarded it. Collings went on deck and the men told him they had a wounded man they must get to the Connecticut shore. He continued on Page 14, Column 1.

New York, Sept. 18—Dramatic and as loaded with suspense as the most lurid movie "thriller" the Collings murder mystery, in all its weird, bizarre, fantastic, utterly incredible detail was moving rapidly towards a sensational denouement today.
At an inquest opened in the tragedy it was testified by Police Sgt. Robert Forest that Mrs. Collings, widow of the slain man, was calm and "smiling" when he came to interview her about the tragedy.

INQUEST OPENS

He was the first officer to question her following the mystery murder aboard the Collings yacht.
Mrs. Collings, asked to be a witness at the inquest by Dist. Atty. Alexander Blue, Suffolk county prosecutor in charge of the case, was unable to attend because of her physical collapse. The inquest was expected to last several days.

Today's principal developments are:
1. full County, N. Y., district attorney, stated that he expected to be able to name the suspected murderers of Collings upon completion of the inquest, opened in Huntington town hall.

WASH AND PANTS FOR MORE 'REAL' COATS OF ARMS PEOPLE

LIBRARY'S NUDE ART WILL DON A RIBBON

Mayor Orders Garb in Roxbury; Unclothed Boys Are Still Pictured in Books

Fall modes for nude boys were in dispute today as the stone youths over which the dispute is waging continued, unmoved, their vigil over the door of Roxbury's new public library.

In all the innocence with which they have gone untried for years in all public libraries and in the public library books, the sturdy boys had stood immobile and in the battle between the comports of modesty was merely.

MAY GET A FIG LEAF

Whether the nude boys will discover their nudity draped with a stone ribbon, as suggested by Mayor Curley in answer to complaints of Mission Hill residents, or whether the boys' new Fall dress will be in the nature of Adam's original leafy garb in the days of Eden, well, the boys seemingly cared not.

The nude figures, those of two boys about 10 years old are part of the library seal over the main entrance of the new Mission Hill branch of the library.

Although this seal has appeared in library buildings and in library books for many years, and library books probably have been read by many of the complainants against the alleged immodesty, no previous complaint has ever been registered against the nude youths.

MAYOR ORDERS DRAPERY

Mayor Curley, following the example, viewed the plaque and then ordered that the figures be draped in some form—perhaps with a stone ribbon.

The stone masters who had draped the youngsters on the building before the Mission Church, however, cannot go ahead with their hard work until the library trustees decide on one of six plans suggested by the architect, Ralph Adams Cross.

In no matter what fashion the nude boys are shielded from the modest gaze and the approaching wind, it will be the first draped replicas of the public library's official seal in history.

It was complained since the Mayor that the figures on the seal are out of proportion and that the contractor, A. Platte, and his stone masons, failed to follow the last lines of the drawing in carving the figures.

MODEST MAY NOW LOOK

This was denied today by Everett McCaskey, general contractor, who declared that the plans and drawings were followed faithfully in every detail.

Draping of the nude youths in the new mode will cost an additional $100, the contracting company incurred the library trustees, but the trustees contend it may be done without extra cost.

be costly running of power lines to long distances. It will make the airplane safe, against fire or explosion, reduce the cost of long distance air travel to one-quarter that of railroad travel.

And, with the long cruising radius that it guarantees, it will enable ships to go around the world twice without taking fuel.

Vincent Astor, of New York, who returned from Europe two days ago, took his big Diesel engine yacht to England, France, Norway, Sweden, Denmark, Germany, the North Cape, through the Baltic, after steaming more than 12,000 miles the way came back to New York carrying much of the fuel with which it started.

You heard of the pigs that swam ashore on the English Channel and fled as they reached the high and dry sand of the beach.

Their ship sank, and they swam courageously. But their necks were very fat, hoofs sharp, and their front feet too fat. As they swam they cut their throats, and landing, bled to death.

You cannot blame the pigs, nature made them that way. But you can blame some that own good American securities, and the cutting their own financial throats, butchering their stocks, throwing them overboard in Wall Street.

LOWELL LEARNS EVEN HIS TRIBE IS BARRED

Winthrop and Saltonstalls Alone Are "The Elect." According to Expert

Harvard, with the new collegiate year not yet even out of the wraps, was shocked today to find itself in an embarrassing controversy over coats of arms being placed on its new dormitory houses composing the Edward S. Harkness "House Plan."

The university, according to a letter received by President A. Lawrence Lowell from a brother of Charles Francis Adams, secretary of the navy and former Harvard treasurer, is using coats of arms on the new houses which families the heraldic designs are supposed to represent are not entitled to them.

Even the Lowell coat of arms, whose use was permitted on Lowell House by President Lowell, is not authentic, the letter of Charles Francis Adams said.

"Dear Lawrence: I should be very glad to allow you to use an Adams coat-of-arms. If it were in my power."

"As you know, I have long been a student of heraldry, and some of my research I have satisfied myself that the only families entitled to bear arms are the Winthrop and the Saltonstalls."

This constituted the second difficulty in which Harvard found itself in the matter of coats-of-arms for the new houses named Dunster, Lowell, Eliot, and Winthrop.

When it came time to affix a Dunster coat-of-arms to Dunster House, it was found that the family of Henry Dunster, first president of Harvard, never possessed one.

Another Dunster family, however, which Harvard purchased from the College of Harvard in England and the privilege of putting up the Dunster arms, belonging to another Dunster family, The English organization, for 400 years, has been the ruling family in England, which families have the right to armorial bearings.

When Lowell House was ready, President Lowell readily gave his permission to affix his coat of arms only to be told in the Adams letter that the Lowell arms were not included in those having the right to the distinction.

Robert B. Lamb, in charge of public relations at Harvard, said today that while the Adams arms may have mentioned the Winthrops and the Saltonstalls, the recollection of the letter was that it contained a statement, somewhere, that the Lowell arms were not included in those having the right to the distinction.

WHOSE RIGHT, ANYWAY?

President Lowell himself, according to Lamb, is in direct line with the Lowells of Andover, England, and the family is entitled to a coat of arms.

At the New England Historical Genealogical Society, Amherst, pl. various books on heraldry and the right to bear arms in America, list all of the House names except Dunster and Kirkland, which in one volume, Adams, Dunster and Kirkland are left out.

This volume, with the three families missing, is "America Heraldica," a compilation of Coats of Arms, Crests and Mottos of Prominent American Families Settled in This Country Before 1800.

In Grozier's "General Armory and Register of American Families" entitled to bear arms, the names Dunster and Kirkland are omitted.

However, in the "Heraldry of the entire world, both Dunster and Kirkland are included with the rest as entitled to bear arms.

BLANKET USED BY 'PIRATES' TRACED

Stolen With Other Articles From Yacht of Bridgeport, Ct., Couple

BY BERT FORD

Boston Evening American

Springfield, Sept. 18—A woman's intuition unearthed evidence which has furnished a definite trail in the "pirate" murder of Benjamin F. Collins, electrical engineer and yachtsman, whose bound and battered body was washed up on the sands of Long Island Sound.

The woman witness has partially cleared up the mystery of the blanket bearing the label of the Charles Hotel of this city which Mrs. Collins claimed was wrapped about her by one of the two men who boarded the cruiser, Penguin, at night and murdered her husband.

Blanket Traced Mrs. Fred J. Voss of 100 Westfield st., Bridgeport, wife of the owner of the Bridgeport Baseball Club, while reading of the Collins mystery, suddenly traced a blanket from the Charles Hotel in among other blankets on her the Atlantic liner, the cruiser.

Making a hurried search for it, she discovered that the hotel blanket and three others, two pairs of her husband's smoking and a carving knife had been stolen from their boat.

She notified her husband, who lost no time informing Capt. H. Hogan of the detective bureau of the Bridgeport police department.

Recalls Getting Blanket Voss told the Bridgeport police that she had borrowed the blanket from the manager of the Charles Hotel in this city, early in April.

John F. Kelley, manager of Hotel Charles, here today, corroborated the story of the blanket told by Voss to the Bridgeport police.

Father Sets Out to Find Bigelow's Professed Bride

GIRL CALLS UP AGAIN TO SAY SHE IS WED

McDevitt to Question "Bridegroom's" Family; No License Issued in Greenwich

In a little while there won't be any more mystery attached to the reported elopement of Stephen Bohier Bigelow, scion of the Back Bay Bigelows, and Mary McDevitt of Brighton.

Because Mary's father, Deputy Sheriff William A. McDevitt, started out today to settle the whole problem.

Bigelow and his bride-as the petite blonde claims to be-were both missing today, but "Dad" McDevitt felt certain that with a little investigation he would find one or both of them.

DAUGHTER PHONES HOME
Meanwhile Bigelow's wealthy relatives, including mother and brother, refused to have anything to say, still professing monosyllabic disbelief in the girl's marriage claim, which the Boston Evening American exclusively published yesterday.

McDevitt, however, intended to see representatives of the Bigelow family, as well as friends of his daughter, and when he left his home on Southfield rd., he had a hunch they would talk to him.

"My daughter phoned me yesterday afternoon and last night," he said, "she said she was married, and for me not to worry, and I believe her. Mary tells the truth."

"But they were to come out here to the house this morning and I have waited a reasonable time. Now, I'm going to find out what's what."

WEDDING NO SURPRISE
"I intend to find my daughter and Bigelow, either through their friends and family or by some other means."

"I know Bigelow. He called at the home, and the marriage my daughter tells of is no surprise, except that it occurred much earlier than I expected."

During the afternoon, McDevitt returned home for a few minutes and received a visit from a woman who said she was a friend of Mary's. She said her friend had heard from Mary by telephone and that the girl expected to return home "soon."

A short time later McDevitt left the house to continue his investigation and did not return until 11:30.

AUBURNDALE
The girl made her announcement to a Boston Evening American reporter yesterday at the Hotel Somerset, Commonwealth ave., where the couple were registered. Bigelow, however, was not there.

HAPPY START OF MARRIAGE THAT ENDED IN DEATH

AN EXCLUSIVE PHOTOGRAPH OF THE COLLINGS-CHELIUS WEDDING IN JUNE, 1924

This pose was made when wedding bells chimed love notes for Benjamin P. Collings and Lillian Chelius, a Dorchester beauty. Lillian has just graduated from Smith College. She was the Smith College 1924 "class-brid," being the first one of the graduates to wed. Classmates were her attendants. The flower girl was Betsy Benbow, of Newton. This was all in June, 1924. The romance between Ben and Lillian started at the Quincy Mansion School, Quincy. They were introduced by Collings' sister, Helen. It was "love at first sight." Relatives insist that their married life was happy.

VATICAN HOLDS 5 'PRISONERS'

Rome, Sept. 18 (AP).—Five leaders of the Catholic Action organization are voluntary prisoners in the Vatican and do not dare leave Vatican City, because of their participation in the recent Italo-Vatican controversy. It was learned today.

One is Count Della Torre, editor of Quadravento magazine. A detective stands outside the editorial office night and day, presumably to arrest him.

Della Torre and the Jesuit Fr. Rosa are slated for dismissal by the Pope as a consequence to the Italian government. The other voluntary prisoners are an officer of the Papal guards, who is said to have furnished the Pope with information for his speech against the head of the Fascist University group, and former heads of Catholic Action connected with the defunct Popular party.

SOCIETY COUPLE SUSPECT BOY ART MODEL

Youth Met in Vermont and Ejected by a Back Bay Hotel Is Hunted

The Beverly estate of Mr. and Mrs. Quincy A. Shaw McKean, prominent Boston and North Shore society couple, was under police guard today, as a result of threatening telephone calls received Wednesday.

The police guard was requested following the return of the couple to their summer home, "Pride's Hill Kennels," after a mysterious visit yesterday to Boston police headquarters, as revealed exclusively in Thursday's Boston Evening American.

YOUTH IN PLOT
Although Boston police officials declared no attempt at blackmail had been made, it was learned a search was instituted for a young man understood to have once served as a model for Mrs. McKean, noted painter and sculptor.

This youth was ejected from a Back Bay hotel after he had made himself obnoxious to guests, and had approached an employee with a proposition to blackmail a hotel official.

While the telephone calls to the McKean were reported to have fallen short of actual threats, they were of such an alarming nature the society couple hurried to Boston to confer with police, and later requested a guard from the Beverly authorities.

MET HIM IN VERMONT
The man being sought is said to have met Mr. and Mrs. McKean in Vermont, where they also maintain a summer place, in addition to that at Beverly and their town home in Commonwealth ave.

He is understood to have been introduced to McKean by a bootlegger and to have served as a model for Mrs. McKean, whose paintings and sculptures have frequently appeared in exhibitions in Boston and other cities.

A short time ago the young man registered at the Back Bay hotel and at first cultivated help and other employees. Later he blossomed out in riding costume and began making overtures to guests.

The management became suspicious and warned other guests against the young man, later requesting him to leave when it was learned he had approached an employee in connection with a plot against an official of the hotel.

INDICTMENT MAY BE ASKED TO FORCE MRS. COLLINGS TO TALK IN PIRATE DEATH CASE

Mrs. Collings after the yacht murder, testified at today's inquest that Mrs. Collings was calm and "smiling" when he was asked to interview her about the tragedy. He said she showed no signs of tears.

3. Further testimony at the inquest was to the effect that Mrs. Collings claims to have seen the body of her husband floating in the water near the Penguin when she was kidnapped and taken into the cabin by the pirate killers. Mrs. Collings claimed that her husband called to her when thrown overboard. Dist. Atty. Blue has contended that Collings was slain on the boat before he was thrown overboard.

4. District Attorney Blue announced that he would call Mrs. Collings as an inquest witness despite previous promises that she would be excused. She was unable to appear today, however, because of her collapse. Her home in Stamford, Conn., is under surveillance of the district attorney's private detective.

5. At Bridgeport, Conn., Fred J. Vides, president of the Bridgeport Baseball Club, said that he believed that the blankets found with Mrs. Collings when she was "rescued" in Oyster Bay, were the ones stolen from his own boat on the Housatonic River in August. The facts concerning the tragedy, that took place, presumably aboard the motor-cruiser, the Penguin, in Long Island sound eight days ago, are known. Dist. Atty. Blue of Suffolk County indicated.

SLAYERS KNOWN

The identities of the actors who participated in the murder of Benjamin P. Collings—whom he beat into virtual unconsciousness and who then tied him, hand and foot, and tossed his body into the sound—likewise are known, Blue said.

The explanation of what happened to Mrs. Lillian Collins Collings, wife of the murdered man, after Collings himself was murdered—the explanation, on perhaps of Mrs. Collings' strange, contradictory statements to which, despite all, she has clung for the past week—likewise is in Blue's possession, the prosecutor said.

"I now have a clear picture of what happened aboard the Penguin, and of what happened afterward," Blue announced. District Attorney Blue caused a surprise today when he announced that he had changed his mind about not having Mrs. Collings testify at the inquest, called this morning, and had requested her presence.

WIFE CAN'T COME

When Clarence William Gibson arrived at the town hall half an hour before the inquest was scheduled to open, and was told about Blue's change of mind concerning Mrs. Collings and her failure to appear, he said:

"The only way I can see to get her here (Idea would be to extradite her as a material witness).

There was no indication, however, that such action was planned at this time.

It was intimated that an indictment in the case might prove necessary in order to make her talk if she refused to appear before the inquest.

authorities again of her own from will.

The witnesses called for today's inquest were Anna Riegs, Jr., special beach patrolman, who found Collings' body when it was washed ashore two days ago; Herbert S. Collings, the slain man's brother; Capt. Harold Howard, who rescued Collings from the motorboat; and Sgt. Forrest, the first police officer to question Mrs. Collings from the motorboat.

These four are N. L. Noteman, wealthy yachtsman; his two friends, E. N. Knapp and Harold Bernie, and his friend chauffeur and handy man, George de Wall.

District Attorney Blue appeared at the inquest carrying a brief case filled with papers found on the Penguin. The case contained copies of bills left by Benjamin Riegs, Washington, D. C. banker, and Mrs. H. P. Collings, respectively, grandfather and mother of Collings.

The papers indicated there had been a legal angle over both wills.

TO ASK INDICTMENT
The district attorney refused to have any new facts be gathered in the case. He simply said: "I do not wish to reveal my information of the crime at this time, because I do not wish to make public the names of the characters involved."

He stated fully, however, that upon completion of the inquest, he expects to have sufficient evidence to bring about the indictment of the murder or murders.

"Will they be indicted," "the 'John Doe' or 'Jane Doe' indicted?"

"Positively not," he replied. "Indictments, or an indictment, will be asked against specific persons, or against a specific person. We don't employ 'John Doe' warrants in Suffolk County."

Blue, however, did state to another interviewer:

"The investigation is going along in its own quiet way and nothing can be done with any degree of certainty along my theory of what occurred until Mrs. Collings again is questioned and clears up any points."

"I feel that Mrs. Collings now has a good deal of light upon the events of the night of the murder, because of the facts."

"I now have a clear picture of what happened aboard the Penguin, and of what happened afterward," Blue announced.

Mrs. Collings Fought Killers, Atty. Says; Too Ill to Testify

Stamford, Ct., Sept. 18 (AP)—

William A. Kelly, counsel for Mrs. Benjamin P. Collings, today for Huntington, accompanied by a stenographer, to attend the inquest into Collings' death.

Mrs. Collings, he said, was still in a highly nervous condition at her home and would be unable to make the trip.

Kelly said he had learned that Mrs. Collings had attempted to slay her husband when he was attacked, beaten with milk bottles, bound and thrown overboard from her yacht, the Penguin. She threw herself into the struggle, he said, but the elder of her husband's assailants buried her back into the cabin where she remained helpless.

The other assailant said she was able to offer, he said, was to attempt to throw him an inflated mattress as a possible life raft, but one of the assailants pulled it from the water.

He has been stationed there, it was stated, despite what was described as an antagonistic attitude upon the part of Stamford authorities, who likewise have the home under guard for the announced purpose of protecting the Collingses from annoyance.

Two other detectives from Blue's office, it further was reported, are in Stamford and are quietly making inquiries there concerning the Collingses. These inquiries, it was said, concern not only Mrs. Collings, the widow, but also her father-in-law and the family of her brother-in-law, Herbert Collings, who lives close by.

ANCHOR FOUND
In this connection, it was recalled that District Attorney Blue said, referring to Mrs. Collings, "I cannot understand the friendship of the family for this woman."

Blue stated today that one of the things Mrs. Collings will be called upon to do, when and if she returns to Long Island for questioning, will be to identify the anchor from the Penguin, retrieved from the bed of Northport Bay yesterday.

The finding of the anchor is a distinct point in substantiation of Mrs. Collings' story of what happened the night her husband was murdered.

The anchor was found at the precise point at which Mrs. Collings has stated the Penguin was moored when the "pirates" came aboard.

Blue's reference to an as yet unidentified weapon "probably of metal," recalled pointedly the fact that Mrs. Collings, in her story of what happened, said that the two "pirates" who boarded the Penguin were armed with pistols.

She said she saw them threaten her husband with them.

Mrs. Collings told one that while she was being taken from the Penguin in the "pirate" canoe, one of her captors threw a pistol into the water," Sgt. Forrest said.

Blue, when asked whether it was this pistol that was being sought, evaded a direct reply, and said: "Mrs. Collings did not mention the matter in her story to me."

QUIZED WIDOW
Forrest was the first policeman to question Mrs. Collings after she was "rescued" from the motorboat in Oyster Bay in which, according to her story, she had been kidnapped after being taken from the Penguin.

Dist. Atty. Blue and Fred Mohr, his assistant, stated that they expected to confer during the day with Felix D. Martini, former secretary of the New York City detective force.

"I have retained Mr. D. Martini," Blue stated, "because the county lacks a sufficient force of trained investigators to run down all the clues presenting themselves in this case. I expect to confer with Mr. D. Martini during the day, and in place of my full possession of all of the facts known to my office."

Di Martini figured prominently in the Halle-Mills murder case, he was regarded as a member of the New York City Police department, as one of the cleverest detectives of the force. Two of his operatives, it was reported, already have been put to work upon the Collings case.

The inquest would not be completed, it was indicated, for several days. Dist. Atty. Blue promised revelations and indictments, therefore, may not be forthcoming until sometime next week.

WATER IN LUNGS
The confusion that existed concerning the story told by Noteman and his guests, Bernie and Knapp, of whom stated that as they drew the Penguin from the water, someone struggling in the water and heard choking cries, was relieved to have been partly dispelled, at least, following the discovery of water in Collings' lungs.

Collings' skull was fractured, and he had been struck at least eight times and was bound hand and foot when he was thrown into the sound. But, according to Mrs. Collings' story, the Valentine appeared almost immediately afterward, while she was being taken away in a captors' canoe.

Physicians admitted that it is rarely possible that Collings, despite his injuries and his bonds, may still have been thrashing about in the water.

Collings' lungs and other vital organs remained in the possession of Dr. Alexander O. Gettler, toxicologist at Bellevue Hospital, today, the subject of highly involved experiments in an effort to determine whether Collings was conscious or unconscious, or perhaps, breathing his last, when thrown overboard.

The question continues to be one of supreme importance for its bearing upon Mrs. Collings' story. Mrs. Collings has said that, even after her husband had been thrown overboard, he called to her while she was struggling with the "pirates" before he died.

Madge Evans Heads Cast for "Skyscraper" With Beaumont Directing

By LOUELLA G. PARSONS

Motion Picture Editor Universal Service

Los Angeles, Sept. 18.—Madge Evans is the one child prodigy who has kept the promise made in her childhood. Madge, famous as a child actor, is rapidly equalizing the reputation made when she was knee-high to a grasshopper. As soon as she finishes "The Greeks Had a Word For It" she will start work as the leading light in "Skyscraper" for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

I don't know whether it's even necessary to remind both my readers that "Skyscraper," by Faith Baldwin, ran in the Cosmopolitan Magazine. With Cosmopolitan's millions of readers, perhaps it's a superfluous explanation.

All the action in "Skyscraper" takes place in a high New York building and Harry Beaumont, as director, will keep the action intact. "Street Scene" proved a single locale need not be monotonous so long as the camera varies its "shots."

All quarrels and misunderstandings in this industry seem to right themselves sooner or later. Men who stopped speaking to each other now find each other. Short life is and how still it is to hold a grudge against anyone. Howard Hawks, by the way, for example, is back at First National. He left with threats of a lawsuit. It is interesting to note his first picture will be "The Doctor," with Richard Barthelmess in the leading role. It is an Hungarian story and different from anything Dick has yet given us. These doctor stories are certainly taking in the money. "Night Nurse" is breaking all records and "Arrowhead" promises to be another knockout.

The Marquis de Palaise has been unfortunate in having his matrimonial adventures on loudy blasted. He has also been unfortunate in having his romances made front page copy, for Henry has something more to him than just being a romantic lover. He is a good director. He did a fine job on the French versions he made. Now Radio is giving him a chance to try his hand at directing an English-speaking picture. This first English picture will be announced later.

Checking in and out at the studio find Russell Simpson on the Universal lot. He is a pioneer actor and a good one and it's nice to see his name once more. He plays an important role in "John And Obedience Halliday," who is threatening to be almost as popular on the screen as he was on the stage—and that's saying plenty. Has signed with Radio. He will play on of the male leads in "Gladiator." Apparently Lowell Sherman and the Chair got on better than most people thought for he again directs Miss Claire. Al Green will direct Douglas Fairbanks, Jr. in "Union Depot." The story is by Kenyon Nicholson. I rather like that title and I hope they won't change it once we get used to it. I got so tired having titles changed on us overnight.

With a wave of the hand, Roland West, director and producer and director of Chester Morris, says "A way with the studios." This innocuous statement was made when I asked Roland West to tell me something of his plans.

"I'll never make another picture in a studio," he said. I told Roland West had four interior scenes in "Corridor" and it was the best picture I ever made. My next picture will be made outdoors.

"You're leaving United Artists, then?" I asked.

"I have been with Joseph Schenck for 15 years," he replied. "I'm going to be with him the next 15, but any picture I make for him from now on will have nature for a background. You can't get real stuff inside studios."

Roland is leaving for two weeks to visit his parents and then on a three to six months' cruise in his boat. He has no destination. He is taking a crew of old friends, men he has known for years. Mrs. West may join him later.

Seen and Heard

Wonder if Papa Richard Bennett talked out of turn? His daughter, Constance, who is a story of her life appears in a New York paper with an announcement that it was edited by Richard Bennett.

"To say that the story is slightly exaggerated is putting it mildly," says Constance. "My father always did have a good imagination and that story—well, I just don't want to think about it."

Meanwhile, Richard denies that he authorized the story now being published. At any rate, Constance says she has been an upset over the story that she hasn't even settled down to getting her new robe for her next picture. Clifton Webb saw his first Hollywood picture from the sidelines, accompanied by Douglas Fairbanks, Jr. in an overcoat and scarf. Clifton stood and watched. All the Hollywood celebrities enter the theater. Now he knows who has the greatest sidewalk following.

I don't want to put myself on the back or anything and say, "I told you so," but it's a dollar to doughnuts that Fifi Dorsay is coming back to play in Will Rogers' picture, "Homer Cray" is writing a sequel to "They Had to See Paris," with Will Rogers as the same character. Now you just couldn't have a story of Paris without Fifi. This sounds as if I'm Fifi's great agent, but I do think she and Will Rogers are a great team—and why not let them continue?

Snapshots of Hollywood—ANN HARDING is black velvet and ermine, making a graceful speech at the opening of "Devotion." LOUISE CLOSSER HALE, showing her stage experience by her poised when introduced. ROBERT WILLIAMS is eating. ANN HARDING "MISS BENNETT," either as a mistake or a joke. MARLENE DIETRICH, accompanied by JOSEF VON STERNBERG, getting a big hand at the premiere. IRENE RICH signing several hundred autograph books belonging mostly to youngsters. MACK SENNITT catching a 160-pound swordfish. GEORGE FITZMAURICE nearly breaking that record with a 160-pound catch. HARRY RAPE vying with MACK and GEORGE with no luck. WALLACE BEERY making plans to go hunting. JACKIE COOPER asking to go along. WALLACE willing, but Jackie's mother vetoing it. That's all today. See you tomorrow!

Roland is leaving for two weeks to visit his parents and then on a

Tallulah Would Give Up Career

Tallulah Bankhead, who stands above the stage in pictures, believes that the only way an actress or any woman in professional life can make real and lasting success of marriage is by abandoning her career.

"When and if I ever marry, I will give up my work on stage and screen," declared Miss Bankhead in an interview given between scenes in "My Sin," her new screen play in which she co-stars with Frederic March.

"I think it would be unfair to my husband to try to share him with my career. It rarely works out well, and if I married the career would have to go."

A person cannot have two ambitions and do justice to them both. You can concentrate on only one thing at a time. Ever since I was a little girl the big ambition in my life has been acting. Nothing else has interested me—except marriage."

Stage Who's Who

Mary Roland, the blonde star of "Viviger Tree," now providing laughs at the Wilbur, was born in Detroit and made her first appearance there in "A Soldier's Boy" in 1905.

She followed with several years of success in the larger cities of the country. Made her New York debut in "Robinson Crusoe" at the Theatre.

Mary Roland played where she captivated the town, and drew millions. Dustin Farnum induced her to return and play opposite him in "The Ranger," which she did for two solid seasons. She then became affiliated with the Wilbur. Miss Roland later played in "My Lady's Dress" at the Playhouse Theatre, New York.

'GIVE' CAMPAIGN FOR JOBLESS TO OPEN OCT. 19

Washington, Sept. 18. (AP.) Owen Young turned his attention today to providing the hundreds of millions of dollars necessary to present before next winter among the unemployed.

The New Yorker, editor of the Young magazine, said that the Young organization plan and a possible Department of Labor committee in the interest of the task are now in the hands of the President's committee on unemployment relief.

The committee membership includes Owen Young, among whom are Paul A. Wall of Washington, D. C., and John D. Rockefeller of New York.

The committee is to be organized by the end of the month, with a view to the presentation of the plan to the President.

PRINCIPAL ACTORS IN COLLINGS' DRAMA OF MYSTERY AND DEATH

FELIX DE MARTINI Former star detective of New York police, who is aiding officials in solving the tragedy.

CLARENCE FAIRCHILD Friend of the Collings family, who gave assistance in early stages of probe.

BENJAMIN P. COLLINGS Victim of sea murder at hands of "pirates" who raided his yacht, the Penguin, off Long Island shore.

MRS. COLLINGS Wife of slain man. She says she was kidnapped and attacked by one of the two killers.

OFFICER DAVID FORREST One of policemen who aided murder probe. He says Mrs. Collings told him "pirates" were armed.

DIST. ATT. BLUE Suffolk County prosecutor, who is directing investigation of case that outwits fiction thrillers.

ATTY. FRED MUNDA Assistant prosecution official, who is aiding his chief in clearing up grisly mystery of the sea.

WIDOW SMILED

Forester said this first story made no mention of an attack upon Mrs. Collings by the other of the two men. In later stories she said she was attacked.

Forester said that when he was summoned to the telephone to see Mrs. Collings, he found her in a state of shock. He said she was crying and that she was holding a small object in her hand. He said she was crying and that she was holding a small object in her hand.

"IT'S THE LITTLE THINGS THAT COUNT"

said the LION to the MOUSE

That's the reason so many shrewd housewives are thronging to our stores and markets—they have discovered a food service where "a little money" releases "bigger values."

It's the little things that count. Save a cent a pound on this—two cents a package on that... you'll find that the family budget will permit you to enjoy "what you want" as well as "what you need."

HAZY ON STORY

"I don't know what became of Ben," Forester quoted Mrs. Collings as telling her sister. "I'll tell you more about it later."

Forester said the hazy story of Mrs. Collings was not a complete one. He said she was crying and that she was holding a small object in her hand.

THIS IS LIFE

SWOPE'S PLAN LOGICAL
BUT BECAUSE IT IS, IT
WILL BE IGNORED.

By ROBERT E. ROGERS

ONE MAY ALWAYS EXPECT something interesting and statesmanlike from Gerard Swope of General Electric. Among the great industrialists of this country he is notable for broad vision, foresight, freedom from traditional points of view, and, especially, specific thinking. Many men have hinted at proposals not unlike those which he made on Wednesday before the National Manufacturers' Association, but no one has been so exact and detailed as to how they should be carried out.

The principles on which Mr. Swope does his thinking seem to be as follows: He has no fear of names and labels. He has no fear of trusting to radically new principles, if they seem to have any chance of working successfully. He believes in individuals, organizations and nations paying their own way. He loves in doing things to encourage initiative. At the same time he obviously believes that good, useful, organizations, which have the power and the efficient machinery to effect social and economic changes, should use that power to help the individual to do his best, confident and free from anxiety.

Same Principles as Tech Fund

For instance, since Mr. Swope has been active, as a member of the Corporation of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, in the conduct of the affairs of that institution, he has been instrumental in several innovations quite in line with his recently announced industrial policy. The tuition at Technology has been raised to $500 a year, on the theory that education is worth more to a man than the small percentage of its cost, which the usual college student covers. College education ought not to make a profit, but it should not be merely charity. The tuition at Technology has been jacked up, though not to its full cost.

But that costly education should be within the reach of any properly qualified student. Mr. Swope, therefore, was instrumental in raising a loan fund of nearly $5,000,000, from which a student who has shown in his first year that he is capable of doing a good job may borrow, under business conditions, on reasonably long term notes, to be paid in small installments. This means that the capable and ambitious student need not expect to have his education handed to him on a silver platter, but he will have the opportunity to buy it on easy terms, like any other commodity.

It seems to me that these principles also underlie Mr. Swope's latest proposal to stabilize employment. Owen D. Young is quoted as saying, rightly enough, that the plan involves grave questions and is not free from criticism. But he adds, rightly, that its significance lies in the fact that a responsible industrial manager is ready to put to the public an offer for the part of industry, presumably, to assume voluntarily responsibilities of vast consequence, not only in the economic but the social field.

Affair of All the Business of Nation

As you know, Mr. Swope's plan involves, briefly, a national workmen's compensation act, modeled after the best features in existing state acts. Life and disability policies, equal to a year's salary, shall be taken out, the cost shared by employer and employee. The two, furthermore, shall share payments of one per cent each toward a pension fund and for unemployment insurance. The system is to apply to employees earning $5000 or less. Unemployment wages are to be 50 per cent of normal, for a more than 10 weeks out of a year. Employees can also make loans without interest from the fund.

So far the proposal is not unlike the older European systems, which date back at least 50 years, to the time when the astute Bismarck stole the Socialist party's thunder to his own advantage. It is not unlike the Lloyd George system, when went into effect in 1912 and which served as the foundation of the present code. Strikingly speaking, the "dole" is only unemployment insurance. But 10 years of enormous unemployment put the system under a strain which it was never intended to meet, and it is not unreasonably broken down.

But the statesmanlike in Mr. Swope's plan lies in the further provisions. State lines and industry lines are to be obliterated. This is to be an affair of all the business of all the nation. All companies with over 50 employees must join a trade association with standard systems of cost accounting and earning state funds. The same system applies to all. And most important, the workmen who leave one company or business to go into another, does not lose his accumulated benefits. His account is transferred to his new job and the system goes on. The United States has been greatly interested in the past in the effective work done by Mr. Hoover, while Secretary of Commerce, in standardizing designs and materials in all kinds of manufacturing. We are well on our way to that kind of standardization. But a national plan for social insurance—for this is what it amounts to—makes us gasp.

National Remedy for National Problem

It is obvious that if depression and unemployment are national problems, the remedy must be a national remedy. The plan might mean the greatest step ever taken to do for the nation the obligation of states' lines and state rights. It would accelerate centralization, which many people believe has already gone too far.

Even more important, perhaps, it means the end of individualism in business life. It marks the end of the period in our history which was ushered in in 1890 with the Sherman anti-trust act, not perhaps on the surface, but fundamentally and in the long run.

Mr. Swope's plan, at first sight, seems perfectly logical, the only completely logical plan that has been proposed. That is the reason why it probably will not be adopted. Our legislators are thoroughly trained in the ideas of one of the most illogical and contradictory systems of government the world has ever seen. Our business men are trained in the theory of a relation between government and industry, which goes dead against the basis of the world today and against all logic of modern business. The opposition to Mr. Swope will come, not merely from the lawyers in our Legislatures, but from those in his own household of business.

The men who created unemployment can probably be trusted to balk at any statesmanlike proposal to prevent its recurrence. But that, if Mr. Swope knows his history, is the traditional fate of statesmen.

RUNAWAY GIRL DIES IN CRASH

CAR STOLEN IN BOSTON COSTS LIVES OF 3

Brookline Victim "Picked Up"
by Roxbury Youths Before
Wild Ride to R. I.

While Westchester, R. I. police today sought to determine who was the operator of the stolen car that yesterday took three lives in a crash, a Brookline mother mourned the death of her 15-year-old runaway daughter, once called the victim.

The girl, Bernice Foster, daughter of Mr. F. H. Foster of 10 University Brookline, left home Sunday night. She met death when the stolen machine in which she was riding, having at a terrific speed, swerved off the road at Westchester and swung back to crash into the car of Mr. and Mrs. Martin of New York R. I., killing that couple instantly.

Miss Foster, when picked up by the police, was found with serious injuries. She was seriously injured, but later being reported today. They were passengers in the stolen car.

Two wealthy Brookline youths were held in $3000 each for a hearing Oct. 2, by Judge Edward B. Pratt, in Hingham Court today in connection with a hit-and-run accident in Hull in which a Somerville woman was fatally injured.

One youth, alleged driver of the dead car, was charged with manslaughter. Several other charges against him were filed. He is John Fulton, 20, of Lowell. The other youth, George A. Hitchcock, Jr., was ordered held on an accusation of being the driver.

The victim, who was struck in Santa Clara ave. Hull last night, was identified as Mrs. Mary Margaret Cahane of 61 Win. St., Somerville, a nursemaid, employed by Dr. H. Cunningham of Jerusalem, N. C.

Petrolman Harold Dowd, of Weymouth, off duty and returning to his home by a detour in Hingham, had heard of the accident and noticed an auto parked at the side of the road. He saw two young men, apparently intoxicated, standing near it. He took the number of the car and notified Hull police.

Police said he recalled thinking he had hit something. He was taken into custody and the officers then went to Hitchcock's home, Hingham.

"I knew he hit something. I told him to stop but he said it was nothing."

Anderson Elected to Post in S. of V.

Without a contest, assistant secretary to Major Clegg, was elected senior vice-commander of the Sons of Veterans at the organization's convention now in session at the Hotel Hampshire, where the votes were received at City Hall. He was elected on the endorsement of 12 states.

DOG IN "BITING CARNIVAL" IN WALTHAM

MRS. CLIFTON L. LIBBY
SHE LAPS A BIT IN WALKING
Mrs. Clifton L. Libby of Lexington st., Waltham, was one of the four victims of a wild dog which tore around "Pleasant Corner" until caught and shot by Patrolman Connolly. The dog grabbed her ankle and zipped the flesh badly.

4 BITTEN BY DOG IN WALTHAM

A dog which has bitten a woman and three boys in Waltham today was rounded up and shot by patrolman Stephen Connolly. The victims are Mrs. Clifton L. Libby, 15 Lexington st., Marshall Lynch and Howard Eaton, both of Sumner st., and Bernard Stanton, 14 Lexington terrace. All were given medical treatment.

Dr. R. A. Sibley, city veterinarian and police are rounding up all stray dogs.

Cadets Back After 1900-Mile Tour

Completing a long tour as part of their training, 113 cadets of the Massachusetts Nautical Training School arrived at the Oyster-Wharf today on the schooner ship Nantuxet. The voyage covered more than 1900 miles.

When H. P. Dunne, commander of the school, today announced that the cadets will be back in the school on Sept. 23 and 24 at the Navy Yard.

The Platoon Lines Up for The Last Time—Only 32 Out of 500 Men

What Has Gone Before
First, a schoolboy when he enlisted, is telling his story of a handful of German soldiers who have survived the years of trench warfare. Peace has been declared. The men are marching homeward. On the way they meet a column of American troops and the soldiers fraternize, trading souvenirs, food, tobacco. Later, as they halt at a brewery and make camp, the news of the revolution at Berlin reaches them. The company commander, Lieut. Heel, rips off his shoulder straps and in the night is seen crying, his head buried in his hands. Marching again, they enter Germany, but children—lightened by the scarecrow troops. The men, sensing an alien fatherland are puzzled and disheartened.

Now Go On With the Story

I got back into the line, but not much doing now. I was taken off his turn and stands on his hands a few times. The girls applaud, but Valentin is dissatisfied. "I was a good artist once, Ferdinand. But this won't do, not even the village fairs," he says gloomily to Kossle. "Gone stiff in the joints, I have. Valentin's famous turn on the horizontal bar—that was a thing to gaze on. I can tell you. And now I've got rheumatism."

"Ach, you be thankful, you've got any bones left at all," says Kossle, and cradles his hand down on the table. "Mum and Willy!"

However sets to work on a kettledrum and rattles. Things begin to be lively again.

Ludwig Driver is seated at the table and will be eager to have been there long ago, but he does not want to go. His arm is swelling and the change has injured slightly. But he remains turned in upon a self and troubled.

I sit down beside him.

"Aren't you glad to be going home?" I ask him. He gets up and goes away. I cannot make him out. Later discover him outside, standing alone. I question him in my mind. We go inside again in silence.

Wine is running over the table, the lamp is smoking and the girls' spirits are high. A warm, damp weariness drifts lightly at the back of my brow; everything has soft, blurred edges.

like star shells seen through fog; my head sinks slowly down upon the table. Then the night comes on smoothly and wonderfully like an express train, across the country. Soon we are at home.

CAPT. CONROY CAMBRIDGE DIES

Two boys also nipped. Bernard Stanton, 8, of Lexington ter., had a tough fight with the dog. A rip in his forehead required four stitches, and his leg was bitten. Marshall Lynch, 3 years old, of Sumner st., is nursing a bitten leg. The dog was a big collie. (Staff photos.)

NEW VICE DRIVE PLANNED HERE

A new drive on vice and crime in Boston was launched today by Police Commissioner Eugene C. Hull. Hull is in a general drive to suppress crime in the city.

The commissioner asked for cooperation from the public. He said that the police department is now in a general drive to suppress crime in the city.

Prisoner to Face Trial for Escape

Preparations for the trial of Arthur W. Tyler, Deer Island prisoner, for escaping from the island boat at Commercial wharf last February began today when Maj. George M. Miley, master of the prison, obtained a warrant from Justice Elihu Abbot.

Tyler escaped as he was returning from court where he had been a witness in another case. Recaptured he was sent back to the island in complete his term. He was examined next week, when he will be tried on the escape charge.

POLICE ARE STUMPED FOR CLUE IN BABY KIRBY'S CASE

HOW SHE GOT IN ATTIC, KEY TO MYSTERY

Away From Home 43 Hours, but Doctor Says She Was Fed and Cared For

The mystery of how Patricia Kirby, two-year-old daughter of Tom Kirby, heavyweight boxer of Dorchester, got into a neighbor's attic and remained there undiscovered for two days, today puzzled police and many others.

The child, clean, happy and without apparent ill effects from her long stay, was found yesterday afternoon in a closet in the attic of the house of Martin Connolly, three doors away from that of her parents, 77 Ballou ave., from which she disappeared Tuesday.

POLICE PUZZLED.
Investigators announced they had just about discarded the kidnapping theory, but in rejecting it, they admitted they had found no satisfactory substitute.

The fact that the child when found showed no physical or mental evidence of her 43-hour fast and close confinement in the attic, they concluded, was a bit baffling.

"I am satisfied," said Police Capt. John D. O'Brien, of the Mattapan station, in charge of the inquiry, "that the little girl wandered up the three flights of stairs to the Connolly attic and was in the dusk of late afternoon, found in the closet and seen asleep."

Just how she started there, however, the chief investigators of the mysterious case was not so sure. He said that the 2-year-old vanished of her own volition.

"I don't see how she could have remained hidden for so long without the assistance of some other person," Massard declared. "The William Johnson of Talbot ave., who examined Patricia after her arrival, said she had been taken care of by an older woman. If she was, it was some one who had been in the house at that time, and I am sure it was not her mother."

ONE-ARMED NINJA.
He recalled that just before the Kirby's marriage in 1923 Mr. Burns at that time the girl's guardian. He was a one-armed man, a former professional heavyweight champion, and a professional heavyweight boxer, said to be scheduled for a bout next week in Chicago, where he has made numerous appearances in the ring.

PATRICIA POSES IN HER ATTIC "PRISON"

Police are trying hard to learn how long Patricia Kirby, the pretty Dorchester child, was in the attic of a neighbor's house at 77 Ballou st. Indications are that she was placed in the attic only a short time before she was found. The baby had been well cared for, police say.

Gloucester Woman Wins Verdict for Injuries Sustained in Boston

A verdict of $17,000 was returned today by a jury in Suffolk Superior Court in favor of Mrs. Florence Merigold Woods of Gloucester, who claimed her career as a mannequin was ruined by injuries received in a fall.

Her suit was against Henderson & Sons, Boston real estate firm, owners of a building at 300 South Street, where she fell from a defective stair. She knew she was injured. She has to use a cane and has put on 12 pounds.

The verdict is one of the largest ever returned in a suit of this kind in this State.

Her attorneys were James H. Brennan and Paul H. Kernan, the latter handling the case in court. The trial was before Judge Daniel T. Connel.

BANK TELLER FOILS FORGED CHECK FRAUD

Suspect Arrested on a Charge of Sending Boy to Obtain the Money

An attempt in which a messenger boy was used to defraud the Boston Continental National Bank, 60 Devonshire st., by means of a worthless check, was frustrated today by the alertness of the teller, Louis Connors.

Connors, a teller at the bank, telephoned the man who was named in the check and asked him to come to the bank. He was told that the check was a forgery and that the man was a messenger boy.

He was taken to the State station and booked for attempted forgery.

Connors was on duty at the bank when Leo Johnson, the messenger, presented him with a check for $100 and a deposit slip and a check for $100, a check with the name of Leo Johnson, who was a messenger boy at the bank. The Tunney Comeback. He Soon Will Decide. Gene Cocks His Ears. Boxing Sickened Him. Thinking Things Over. Million-Dollar Cure.

Is Stork Holding Back Announcement?

Clang of gong and clink of coin. It gets 'em all the same—Corbett, or Jeffries, or Jack Dempsey, or Tunney. He's name—Jeff of old and Gentlemen Jim, and later, Mainstay Jack. Moths to flame returned to ring and Gene will follow them back!

The moth to the flame, the Romany lass to the Romany lad the fire goes to the old fire horse, the open road to the lingo and the smell of the rein—or is it the clink of the coin?—to the old fighter, Dempsey, Leonard and Tunney, all names to conjure with. The old Man Killer and King Bessie already know the Come Back Trail. Gentleman Gene from off the sidewalks of New York is wavering. He is listening to a proposition of Damon Runyon and Bill Paraworth to fight once, perhaps twice, for M. J. Hearst's Milk Fund next summer. Until a few weeks ago Tunney would not even listen or talk things over. Now he even has asked for two weeks to think things over. Gene never was one to jump at conclusions. He always looked before he leaped. His two weeks "time to think things over" is tantamount to an impending (favorable) decision, say those who know him best.

Two weeks to think things over. "Two weeks with Mrs. Tunney in their Maine hunting camp." Has Gene Tunney in his own mind already decided to accept the Milk Fund offer? Even a millionaire would hesitate to turn down $750,000, a sum Tunney almost certainly would get for two fights next season. Is Tunney postponing official announcement of his decision to return to the ring until after a critical period in the lives of Mr. and Mrs. Tunney? Reports persist that the stork is hovering over the Tunney domicile, that an heir apparent may be born to the Tunneys shortly. Is Gene withholding his decision to re-enter the realm in which he made his name, fame and fortune, until he is certain that all is well with the former Polly Lauder? Who knows?

Perhaps we err in predicting Gene Tunney will come back. Perhaps the wish is father to the thought. One likes to have his judgment proved. The day Gene Tunney abdicated the throne and took a last farewell to his fans we told him some day he would come back, some day the lure of the ring, the clang of the gong, or the clink of the coin would prove too irresistible.

"I am not a Dempsey, a Jeffries or a Corbett, George," answered Gene. "My desires, my inclinations, are entirely different. The ring is abhorrent to me. I want no more of professional boxing and never will want it. I never again will don the gloves in a public encounter. The day I do that I want to be committed to an insane asylum."

Even before his public abdication Tunney was heartily sick of boxing and had made up his mind to permanently retire. We sit with Gene on the porch of Bill Osborn's beautiful place at Speculator, where the Adirondack pioneers march down the hills to take their feet in the turquoise waters of Lake Pleasant.

"I don't want to hate the band that fed me, George," confided the champion. "I don't want to knock the sport that has made me rich and famous. But I am sick of it, heartily sick of it. Sick of its cunning managers, its grafting parasites, its hookmen and bunkum. The boxers are all right. A good, tough, sure crowd, but some of them, but almost all of them fine fellows, nevertheless. It's the game itself, not the boxers, which nauseates me. I soon will be through with the stinking mess forever."

And now Tunney's nostrils come more dilate to the smell of a rein. The clink of the coin is in his ear and he finds it pleasant. He apparently now can think about, talk of, listen to boxing without becoming nauseated. The flame flutters, and he moth is fluttering its wings with it.

Shortly a series of Gene Tunney articles will appear in a weekly magazine. Is Tunney over a great publicity getting, seeking to publicize those articles by inducing talk of his prospective return to the ring? One might have said the same thing about Dempsey. Concurrent with the publication of Jack's biography in a nationally known weekly the old Man Killer started his all-around tour of publicity. But he fought four the old Mainstay. Now he is going through it not to publicize his biography. The old Man Killer is fighting his way back into shape. If a 31-year-old man can get into fighting condition, Jack Dempsey will be the man. He is going about it rightily.

Dempsey vs. Tunney again? A third match might attract as great a throng as witnessed the Battle of the Big Rain in Philadelphia and the Battle of the Long Count in Chicago. Tunney vs. Schmeling? There isn't a stadium big enough to hold the gathering. Tunney vs. Sharkey? If the Sharkey man should triple over the great Garret New York would have to add to Yankee Stadium to accommodate the throng that would want to see Gentleman Gene and the Garzulous Gob.

One of these matches would net Gene Tunney $500,000. Two of them would net $750,000 to pour into the Tunney coffers. The three would net Tunney richer by a cool million dollars. Boxing still may make Gene Tunney sick. But a million dollars certainly would make him well.

"Being positively nauseated, but I'll not knock the game. That brought me off the sidewalks in fortune and to fame. The whole blessed sport is rotten. I really can't stand the smell. Oh, horror! Now sick I am—but a million might make me well."

Wherefore do ye spend money for that which is not bread, and your labor for that which satisfieth not? Isaiah, LV. 2.

Hub Leads in Retail Trade Due to Ingenuity of Her Merchants

Boston and New England, in proportion to their population, are found by the United States government to be THE GREATEST RETAIL MARKETS IN THE UNITED STATES.

Here in Boston, the census revealed, according to announcement at the very successful retail conference, there was a per capita retail trade of $877.85, or more than double the spending power per person of the country as a whole.

We are reckoned as a great metropolitan district, with a population of 2,300,000.

And our retail sales per person EXCEEDED THE AVERAGE SALES OF ALL THE OTHER GREAT METROPOLITAN CITIES OF MORE THAN 1,000,000 POPULATION BY 38 PER CENT.

We did in the Metropolitan Boston market alone a retail business of $1,250,000,000, or 2 1/2 per cent of the total retail trade of this rich country, a record out of all proportion to our population.

We are found by the United States government experts to possess attractive residential suburbs, whose people pour into the trade marts of Boston.

Our auto parking conditions, much as we dislike them and much as they can be improved, tend to promote trade convenience for our visitors better than the other great metropolitan cities.

We are, historically, geographically and climatically, a mecca for countless tourists and vacationists of spending ability.

But to the ingenuity and resourcefulness of our Boston merchants—who have been for years the originators and energetic promoters of new and progressive merchandising methods—these federal analysts attribute largely the extraordinary growth and permanence of Boston's superiority in the retail field.

Surely it is a record to be proud of and to make the most of in the eyes of the country and the world.

Let us advertise this dominance.

And in doing so let us not forget the fact that the supremacy of Boston and New England is due not to any one class or group but to the versatility, dependability and energy of the people of Boston and New England as a whole.

Lifting Auto Burdens Industry Carries Too Heavy Tax Load

Motor vehicle registrations in this country increased 180 per cent in the past ten years.

In 1921, there were 10,500,000 cars and machines registered. In 1930, there were 28,500,000. And, of course, the figures for this year will very substantially increase that number.

But the license taxes, known as registration fees, have outstripped even that record.

Ten years ago, the autos and other motor vehicles paid $122,500,000 in license taxes.

Last year, they paid $355,700,000, an increase OF MORE THAN 100 per cent.

This does not include the gasoline tax. One State, Florida, has a 7-cent tax per gallon, seventeen other States 5 and 6-cent rates.

Here, in Massachusetts, we are paying a gas tax that amounts to about one-fourth the value of the fuel itself.

Nor does it include the excise or property tax, which has skyrocketed in many of our cities and towns.

Nor the compulsory liability insurance tax, which in two years will have elevated 17 per cent if Commissioner Brown approves the rates now before him for decision.

The automobilist has been selected for a sandbagging that will leave him helpless.

A halt must be called by our taxing authorities unless they want to stagnate one of our finest industries, deprive business of one of the most capable arms of transportation and the ordinary man and his family of one of their most valuable means of recreation and pleasure.

The Legislature should begin by reducing the insurance tax.

Birds Can't Vote So Politicians Ignore Their Needs

It is estimated there are some 25,000,000 song and in scissorbirds birds within the confines of Massachusetts.

Further, that they consume some 21,000 bushels of insects DAILY in the five months of Summer weather.

Without them agriculture would be blasted and human life made unendurable.

The expenses of conserving wild life are received entirely from the license fees paid by the men who hunt, trap and fish. These fees pay the salaries of the thirty-five inspectors who enforce the game laws and prevent their extinction. Philanthropic citizens have contributed most of the game sanctuaries and preserves.

The State has been and still is niggardly in this matter of vital importance to its natural and agricultural resources. Of course the birds have no votes to cast on election day. So the statesmen can ignore them without danger to themselves.

Great Masonic Charity

Leon Martin Abbott of Boston announces that the organized bodies of Freemasonry in this country are spending $50,000 a day for charitable and relief purposes.

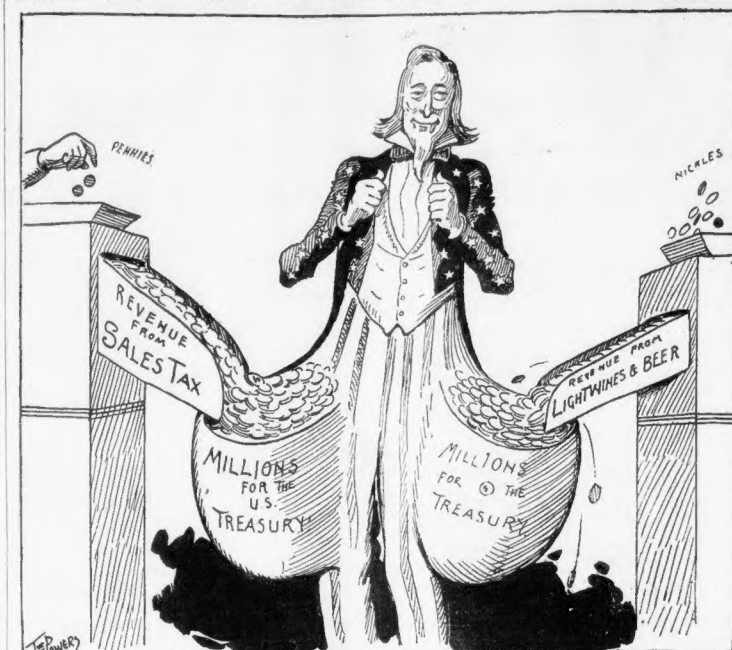

It is an extraordinary sum.

The public sees visible evidences in the Masonic schools and in the homes and hospitals which provide education, shelter and comfort.

The public, too, has some appreciation of the fact that the Masons extend financial aid to members of the fraternity in distress and to the women and children dependents in need.

But this charity is great in its unstintedness and a statement such as has been made by Mr. Abbott, the Grand Commander, alone gives us some realization of its kindly extent.

The Sales Tax in Canada

Bills are to be introduced in the next Congress to establish a permanent Sales Tax in the United States—a reform long advocated by the Hearts newspapers.

Such a tax has been proposed in practically all countries in Canada and other countries. Mr. M. Gratton O'Leary, one of Canada's well-known editors, discusses its benefits in a series of articles prepared for the Hearts press, of which this is the first.

By M. Gratton O'Leary
Distinguished Canadian Editor.

IF and when President Hoover and Congress set out to explore taxation fields that will turn deficits into balanced budgets with a minimum of public hardship, they might profitably examine Canada's experience with the sales tax. For after a trial of ten years the sales tax has become an accepted and integral part of the Canadian fiscal system, and is regarded as the least objectionable and most equitable and profitable of all the Federal taxes.

In one year the tax netted a revenue of $120,000,000. In eleven years the total has exceeded $800,000,000.

Moreover, the sales tax has been easy to collect and socially non-burdensome. Exemption of articles for food and shelter protects the masses. Similar exemption of articles of primary production assists the business and financial classes.

Canada adopted the Sales Tax because of the urgent necessity for revenue to end a long series of deficits and to enable the country to cope with the enormous obligations of a war legacy and of a railway crisis.

It was imposed by a government which, having tried a high income tax, a war profits tax, a corporation tax and various forms of assistance taxes, was casting about for a form of taxation that would not cripple business, that would be borne without undue complaint, and that would not hasten the death of the government which imposed it.

Opposed at first, and bitterly, it is as popular today as it is possible for a form of taxation to be.

In 1920 Canada was confronted with a financial crisis. A pre-war debt of $350,000,000 had grown to a net debt of $2,350,000,000, a figure which, added to provincial debts, represented a staggering burden for a population of less than ten millions.

In addition, there was the vast nationalization experiment in the matter of transportation. The Grand Trunk and Canadian Northern Railways had been taken over by the State; enormous railway obligations had to be met; 20,000 miles of railway had to be put into condition.

In 1919, as a result of these outlays, the Federal deficit was $384,000,000, which, on a population basis, was the equivalent of a $2,840,000,000 deficit in the United States. By 1920 this deficit had jumped to $435,000,000; in 1921 it was $197,000,000; in 1922, $81,000,000.

The year 1923 brought the first change from deficits to a surplus.

The Sales Tax, lightly imposed at first—it began at one per cent—was increased to 6 per cent AND NETTED THE TREASURY $100,000,000, THE RESULT BEING A SURPLUS OF $30,000,000.

In the following year—1924—revenue from the Sales Tax had jumped to $120,000,000, when once more there was a surplus. AND EVER SINCE, whether in good years or in bad, the Sales Tax has enabled Canada to produce annual surpluses or to balance her budget, or to avoid heavy deficits.

Since its adoption in 1920, the Sales Tax has brought Canada the enormous sum of $866,807,000. Considering that Canada has fewer than ten million people, and taking account of comparative volumes of sales, this means that A SIMILAR TAX IN THE UNITED STATES WOULD HAVE PRODUCED PROBABLY $10,000,000,000, OR AT THE RATE OF A BILLION A YEAR.

Following is the total revenue secured from the Sales Tax year by year since 1920:

1920.....	$15,587,000	1926.....	$98,097,000
1921.....	78,803,000	1927.....	82,306,000
1922.....	75,656,000	1928.....	74,100,000
1923.....	100,000,000	1929.....	65,646,000
1924.....	120,676,000	1930.....	44,859,000
1925.....	82,810,000	1931 (5 months).....	20,785,000

The explanation of the drop in revenue after 1924 is simply that, as the financial position of the country improved, the tax was gradually reduced.

In other words, with deficits moved into surpluses and in the face of diminishing post-war expenditure, taxation was lightened all along the line.

Thus in 1924 the Sales Tax was reduced from 6 to 5 per cent; in 1927 from 5 to 4 per cent; in 1928 from 4 to 3; in 1929 from 3 to 2, and in 1930 from 2 to 1.

Moreover, in the years between 1924 and 1930 a whole range of articles was exempted from the tax—the range including articles of food and shelter and also articles used in national development and in primary production.

This year, however—and this is the best possible evidence of Canada's belief in the Sales Tax—a decline in revenues and a Federal deficit brought an increase in the tax from 1 to 4 per cent, the increase being brought about, curiously enough, AT THE INSTINCTIVE OF THE COMMERCIAL AND BUSINESS COMMUNITY.

Why this was so will be explained in further articles.

Listen, World! By Elsie Robinson

Chivalrous Women
CHIVALRY—WE women are still strong for it. Even though we have equal rights, equal liberties, most of us expect men to protect us and go ga-ga over us as they did over our grandmas. And, generally speaking, the boys live up to our expectations. They don't do otherwise. From the cradle up, Brother is taught to be nice to Sister. Sister, it is true, may pick times as big as a wallops as Brother and she it plenty. She may be a young hellion and Brother a young fellow, but chivalry must be maintained at all costs. As a consequence, Brother grows up thinking that Sister should receive special consideration and exemption, such as he would never dream of giving a man. And Sister, in spite of her boasts about equality, sees that she gets it.

Yes, women like chivalry—BUT HOW CHIVALROUS ARE WOMEN TO MEN?

Take love and marriage... romantic institutions but also grave risks, as every woman will acknowledge. But will she acknowledge that the risk is as great for the man as it is for her?

Listen in on any married woman while she is talking to her lady friends. It is dollars to doughnuts that she is talking about her husband—this being the favorite theme of any Miss when she meets another Miss. She is probably fond of her husband and generally contented with the marital state. But would you guess it from her conversation? You would not.

To hear her, tell it, she is the most misunderstood, unappreciated and abused human on earth. With wit she tells her husband's faults and failures, exposes his weakness, spills the most intimate beans... all the time obviously pitying herself for the disappointments he has brought upon her.

Does a man do this in talking to other men? Not once in a thousand times. His disappointments may have been quite as great as his lady wife's—his sensitiveness may have been as deeply lacerated—but he observes the code of chivalry. Gentlemen mustn't bleat.

Or consider the matter of motherhood. No citizen expects or deserves a bigger flannel than a good mother. But after all, mama isn't the whole show. It requires as much guts and implies as much grief to support a bunch of youngsters for 21 years as it does to give them birth and spank them into shape. But does mama admit that? Anything but! Papa's pangs are nothing to hers. Papa is merely doing his duty but she is making The Great Sacrifice. And yet, she probably likes the did men. But why should men respect appreciation?

Then there's divorce. By chivalrous tradition, this is commonly accepted of the wife. With little or no protest, the gallant husband allows himself to be written down as a brute, a deserter, an unfaithful cad. And how often does any wife stand up and say—IT'S AS MUCH MY FAULT AS HIS. I NAGGED HIM AS MUCH AS HE BULLIED ME. IF HE'S A FAILURE I AM.

Have you ever heard a divorcee say that? No, you haven't. And you won't hear her either before you will. For chivalry isn't as yet a feminine virtue... see L. How about you?

The Game of Life
Youth takes a fling at fame, and middle-age will die
With fortune high or low to sell its strength at better price,
But later when the blood grows cool the older man will find
That from the lesser joys of life comes greater peace of mind.

Youth runs the race that's swift and light, like the battle boat,
And middle-age oft looks for peace in joys that have it not.
But men in life's later afternoon their past mistakes review,
And see they might have lived their lives without so much ado.

I quarrel not with youth nor men just at their prime,
For each will quit the fields they hold when comes the proper time.
And each will later come to sit beneath a shady tree
And see how easy, had they known, the game of life can be.
